AUTUMN LEAVES

Leaf-peeping season is just around the corner, a time that inspires nature lovers to hit the road in search of the season's vibrant displays of color in picturesque and bucolic settings. While driving along famed foliage routes is one way to experience nature's last hurrah before winter, there are also dozens of restaurants across the country that offer spectacular views, combining a memorable or perhaps even romantic meal with the brilliant colors of American yellowwoods, European beeches, sugar maples, red maples, and more. Here are 40 restaurants around the country known for their unforgettable views.

THE DINING ROOM AT SALISH LODGE & SPA

Snoqualmie, Washington

Salish Lodge offers the memorable combination of picturesque waterfalls and seasonal foliage. The restaurant is perched atop Snoqualmie Falls along the Snoqualmie River. When not gazing out the windows at the view, guests enjoy local and sustainable menu items that showcase Pacific Northwest cuisine with flavors.
